Tracking Women's Graduation Rate

Al-Muthanna University tracks and measures the graduation rates of women compared to men to ensure equitable outcomes. Our data collection allows us to monitor any disparities in graduation rates and assess the effectiveness of support structures in place. While women currently demonstrate high graduation rates across all departments, we remain committed to closing any potential gaps by implementing targeted support programs, such as academic advising, mentorship, and additional resources to help all students succeed. This proactive approach reflects our dedication to promoting gender equity and academic success for every student.
